Yanks Score Important Advances On Luzon

JAP REVERSES MAY MEAN END FOR PREMIER

Shattering Of Agno River Line Starts Optimistic Victory Predictions

Yanks Push 30 Miles Inland, Quarter Of Way To Manila

By United Press
Tokyo betrayed mounting war jitters over the successful American campaign in the Philippines today, hinting that Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso may be forced to resign while reporting new air blows against the Japanese island bastion of Formosa.

The enemy-reported attacks on Formosa—presumably by planes of Admiral William F. Halsey's rampaging Third Fleet—coincided with important new gains on Luzon where Gen. Douglas MacArthur's liberation forces poured across the strategic Agno river and sent spearheads to within 80 miles or less of Manila.

At least 200 U. S. carrier planes raked Formosa's airfields and communications lines, Tokyo said, in the fourth major strike this year to prevent the Japanese from moving air and troop reinforcements southward to embattled Luzon.

Third Fleet Active
The broadcasts indicated that the Third fleet, under radio silence since it wrecked 38 enemy ships in attacks along the French Indo-China coast last Friday, had swung north from the South China sea for the new Formosa attacks.

Japanese armament reports issued a communique reporting that the carrier planes bombed numerous airfields and communications facilities and also strafed and bombed Taichu, Shoka, Takao and other villages for four and a half hours—from 8:30 a. m. to 1 p. m. (Tokyo time). Five of the raiders were said to have been shot down and another damaged.

The enemy-reported carrier raid came on the heels of a B-29 Superfortress strike on Formosa yesterday.

STEALS DRESSES FOR WIFE; SELLS THEM, JAILED

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—Benjamin Robinson, 25, wished to rebuild himself in his estranged wife's affections, police said, so he stole 19 dresses valued at $620. But instead of giving her the finery, Robinson, a Negro, peddled them on the streets and offered her the cash proceeds. She spurned both the cash and Robinson. Police took Robinson.

WORLD SNARL CONFRONTS FDR

Urgently Important Six Month Period To Come After Inauguration

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—A delicate and urgently important six months period in the political relationships of the major Allies begins this week with President Roosevelt's inauguration for a fourth term as President of the United States.

The ceremony will take place on the south portico of the White House at noon Saturday. Mr. Roosevelt will leave soon afterward for a secret conference with Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Marshal Josef V. Stalin.

The President probably will be back home by mid-March. Soon thereafter it is expected that the United States will issue invitations for a full dress conference of the United Nations. That conference will undertake to draft a peace-guarantee treaty which—if the schedule can be maintained—will be submitted to the senate before June for ratification. Such a treaty would formally commit ratifying powers to the collective postwar security proposals implicit in the Dumbarton Oaks agreement reached here last autumn in conferences between representatives of the Soviet Union, Great Britain and the United States.

Hurry-Up Program
This is a hurry-up program for international agreement and action on postwar peace machinery. It is designed to avoid the political disagreements which turned former military friends and Allies into diplomatic foes after World War I. This time it is hoped to obtain agreement on basic issues before the end of hostilities and while the bonds of military interdependency remain secure.

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign supporters last autumn urged as a top reason for his reelection his solid personal relationships with Churchill and Stalin which they said would prove of enduring value in working out the difficult problems of the postwar.

ROBBERS TAKE $300,000 GEMS, BUT LEAVE CASH

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 15—Police searched today for burglars who prefer the sparkle of diamonds to the feel of cash and a good watch. The thieves broke into Schneider and Son's jewelry store in the night, cracked two safes and left with $300,000, mostly in diamonds. They ignored a safe containing watches less glittering jewelry and $2,000 in cash.

BRITISH FLEET READY TO PLAY PACIFIC ROLE

Commander Says Navy Soon To Be Fighting Alongside Yanks

PRAISE FOR AMERICANS

Fraser Looks Forward To Chasing Japs Back To Home Islands

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, LEYTE, Jan. 15 — A big British battle fleet is ready for action against the Japanese in the Pacific and will be fighting alongside the United States Navy in the immediate future, according to Adm. Sir Bruce Fraser, commander-in-chief of Britain's Pacific fleet.

Fraser, who watched the invasion of Luzon from the bridge of an American warship and narrowly escaped death when a Japanese bomb landed aboard, told a press conference that his fleet would play an important role in the next phase of the Pacific war but that few British troops could be expected in this theatre until the European conflict ends.

British naval men are looking forward to "chasing the Japs back to Japan," he said, adding that "you'll see us in action in the near future with a large-sized fleet."

After seeing the American Navy in action for the first time in the Lingayen gulf landing, Fraser had high praise for the Yanks' efficiency and he described the landing as a "very bold" stroke that the Japanese were unable to counter.

"They were able to damage some ships, but they couldn't even slow up the convoy," he said.

Guns Scare Japs
The admiral asserted that the Lingayen gulf operation differed considerably from the Allied landing in Normandy in that Gen. Douglas MacArthur's troops were put ashore after a three-day naval bombardment that pulverized the enemy's coastal defenses, whereas the invasion in France was a swift power thrust.

"One thing we've all learned is that the Japanese positively don't like artillery—either from sea or land. No wonder they ran for the hills when they saw our battleships sitting off at 5,000 yards belching 14 and 16-inch shells. That's mighty terrifying on the receiving end, you know."

Fraser revealed that he was aboard the same warship on which Lt. Gen. Lumsden, Prime Minister Winston Churchill's personal representative to MacArthur, and Time Magazine Correspondent William Chickering were killed during the Lingayen landing.

Fraser was knocked down by the bomb blast, but escaped injury.

MURDER TRIAL OFFICIALS GET DEATH THREATS

CAIRO, Jan. 15—The presiding justice and chief defense attorney in the Egyptian court trying two confessed Jewish assassins for the murder of Lord Moyne received letters threatening them with death today.

The letters, addressed to Mahmoud Mansour Bey, president of the trial court, and Tewfik Doss Pasha, defense attorney, were delivered to a court messenger by a bicyclist.

"This will not affect us," the president said.

The letter to Doss said he would meet the same fate as Moyne unless everything possible was done for the two defendants, Eliahu Bet-Tsouri and Ellahu Hakin, admitted members of the Stern gang of terrorists sworn to battle British rule in Palestine.

Official sources said the letters were written by Sternists, who demanded that the trial take place before an international rather than a national court.

Both Mansour and Doss are Egyptians.

Moyne, British resident minister in Cairo, was assassinated last year as he entered his automobile.

CARMEN PUTS BLAST ON ROSE

Beautiful Filipino Girl Staging Personal Feud With Jap Radio Star

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15—Beautiful Carmen Ligaya, Filipino girl guerrilla leader who for two years helped fight the Japanese in her native land, was in San Francisco today waging a personal feud with Tokyo Rose over the shortwave radio.

Carmen's six daily broadcasts composed of music and comment are directed principally to her people in the Philippines and the Filipino soldiers fighting under Gen. Douglas MacArthur. But the fan mail coming in from all over the Pacific proves she is the first effective competitor the U. S. has offered the notorious record player in the enemy capital—Tokyo Rose.

The boys listen to Tokyo Rose, Carmen says, because "they like to hear good music and a woman's voice."

Carmen said she had heard the famous Japanese siren a few times over the guerrilla radio.

"She is nice in a disagreeable sort of way."

But most of the secret Filipino radios have always been turned to KGEL—now KGEX—in San Francisco.

"We used to listen to the newscasts by Mariano, the Filipino OWI announcer. Some of the news I would take down in shorthand to print in our underground papers."

SWEDES BLOW UP BRIDGE AND KILL 180 HUNS

LONDON, Jan. 15—More than 180 German soldiers were killed and several hundred were injured when Norwegian paratroops, flown from Britain, blew up a railway bridge near Joerstad, Norway, Saturday, plunging a troop train into a ravine, the Norwegian Information Bureau said today.

Blasting of the bridge cut the last rail link between Northern Norway and Trondheim, the bureau said.

The attack was another in a month long series which the Norwegian paratroops have been carrying out against vital German communications in Norway.

May Favors 48-Hour Week, Requests Prompt Manpower Law Action

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Warning against further delay in attacking manpower problems, Chairman Andrew J. May, D. Ky., of the house military affairs committee, today urged prompt action on work-or-fight legislation with provisions to put all essential war industries on a 48-hour work week.

May, author of a pending bill to force all 18-45 year old men into essential jobs on threat of induction into Army work units, said in an interview that he would offer the 48-hour week proposal as an amendment to his bill as a means of making better use of available manpower.

The chairman revealed his plan as the committee, moving to complete hearings on the bill this week, called for testimony from Lewis G. Hines, representative of the American Federation of Labor; Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, who favors more sweeping national service legislation; and a spokesman for the Socialist party, which opposes any program based on compulsion.

President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations will testify tomorrow, with a representative of the National Association of Manufacturers expected to present industry views the following day. Organized labor and industry generally favor voluntary, rather than compulsory, methods to solve the manpower crisis.

Asks Prompt Action
May appeared skeptical about the success of proposals to delay enactment of compulsory controls pending further government-industry-labor conferences to work out ways of tightening up the war (Continued on Page Two)

TOBACCO MEN WILL OFFER NEW CIGARET PLAN

CHICAGO, Jan. 15—A new distribution program which may offer some relief for the cigarette hungry smoker will be proposed today at a meeting of the National Association of Tobacco Wholesalers.

Joseph Kolodny, executive secretary of the association, refused to divulge the nature of the new program, but said it would be a "new departure" from anything tried to date.

The plan, he said, would not produce any more cigarettes than the 70 per cent of normal supply still available to civilian smokers, but it is designed to improve the present methods of wholesale allocation to retailers.

Kolodny denied widespread rumors that wholesalers or manufacturers are either withholding the smokes or obstructing the flow of cigarettes through normal channels.

Wartime population shifts, he said, have upset the industry's normal methods of distribution, based on a ratio of eight retail outlets per thousand population.

A sudden influx of war workers in a small town means thousands more smokers, he explained, but not many more cigarettes for the harassed retailers.

LABOR STARTS DRIVE ON DRAFT

Solons Told Wage Freezes Are Responsible For Some Plant Shortages

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Organized labor formally opened its campaign against national service and work-or-fight legislation today.

Lewis G. Hines, legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, meanwhile told the house military committee that present manpower shortages were caused principally by frozen wage levels in certain plants.

He said wage increases in plants where production speed-ups were needed would have no significant inflationary effect because they would involve relatively few plants and, in the main, products bought by the government.

Hines insisted that national service legislation would discriminate against labor by forcing it to work (Continued on Page Two)

3,250,000 REDS, HUNS LOCKED IN GREAT BATTLE

Bitter Fighting Flares On Entire Front, German Command Says

MOSCOW REMAINS MUM

American, British Armies Form Junction, Partly Encircle Houffalize

By United Press
One of the greatest battles of the war raged today along a virtually unbroken front from Lithuania to Yugoslavia, with possibly the entire front," the German locked in at least nine closely synchronized struggles.

"Bitter fighting has flared up on the entire front," the German high command reported.

The Russians already were calling their great Winter offensive the March to Berlin. Nazi military spokesmen warned that the Red Army "intends to end the war."

So far Moscow had confirmed only Marshal Ivan S. Konev's push across the frozen plains of South-Central Poland, aimed squarely at the great Nazi defense bastion of Krakow and the rich industries of German Silesia.

But Berlin said the Red Army offensive had raced to both ends of the front, with sledge-hammer blows so near each other that it was difficult to determine where one attack left off and another began.

Nazi propagandists said the Soviets had flung 115 divisions, plus more than 15 tank corps, into four fronts alone, while a United Press dispatch from Moscow figured German strength in Poland at 100 divisions.

Huns In Flight
On the single new front reported by Moscow, Soviet dispatches said the Germans had been unable to rally, and the Russians were rolling westward at a clip which threatened to split the Nazi armies in Poland.

The German high command said the main battle zones, from south to north, were Budapest, the Danube valley northwest of the Hungarian capital, the Hungarian-Slovakian border area, the Krakow front, the Pulawy region of the Vistula valley 66 miles south of Warsaw, the Magnusz area 33 miles below Warsaw, the Vistula-bug triangle north of the Polish capital, Soviet bridgeheads across the Narow on either side of Pultusk north of Warsaw, and a broad front in East Prussia.

One broadcast quoted the Soviet writer Ilya Ehrenburg as saying in the communist party organ Pravda that "The Red Army is heading for Berlin. . . . In Berlin we shall be."

British Yanks Join
The American First and Third and the British Second armies formed a junction in the collapsing Ardennes salient today and partly encircled the German key position of Houffalize.

Dispatches from the Western front said the retreating Nazis were trying to rally for a stand around St. Vith, their last strong point on Belgian soil at the base of the salient near the German border. An American breakthrough there might envelop a large part of their covering forces to the west.

The three Allied armies were closing in on Houffalize from points two to four miles away. The main road to St. Vith, 18 miles to the northeast, had been cut and German rear guard were fighting strongly to cover a withdrawal over secondary roads.

OUR FIGHTING MEN

It was a generous tribute that Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery paid to the American Army the other day, for the "courage and fighting quality" by which, he said, our men had halted the German drive into Belgium. Again and again he spoke of the doughboys "tenacity in battle that makes them great soldiers," and singled out division after division for special praise. Then he pointed to the Allied teamwork which made such success possible.

"It was to me," he observed, "a remarkable thing, how in time of danger the Allied team rallied together. This thing of Allied solidarity is terribly important. Teamwork wins battles and battle victories win wars."

Then he proceeded with a notable tribute to the American leaders.

"On our team the captain is General Ike," he said. "We are great friends. We are all in this fight together, and we must not allow any wedges to be driven between us. On the map you see the enemy's gains, that will not win the war. He will slowly but surely lose it all. He must have scraped together every reserve he could lay his hands on for his job. One must admit that he has dealt a sharp blow, and he has sent us reeling back, but we have recovered and he has been unable to gain any great advantage. He has therefore failed in his strategic purpose, unless the prize is smaller than his men were told."

In some ways this war is much like an American football game. The rival teams sway back and forth, and there are changes in the lineup. But little by little the side with the most determination, or the most skill, or the strongest hearts, or all of these together, wins the game.

HOW GENERALS DIE

MARSHAL Albert Kesselring, the German commander in Italy whose skill repeatedly baffled the Allies, is dead. So says Berlin, whose report may or may not be trusted. If true, the Nazi generals of the first rank are war casualties. It is not clear in all cases whether they were killed in battle or murdered for the crime of questioning Hitler's military wisdom.

The Allies' losses also have been heavy. Irreplaceable was Lieutenant General Lesley J. McNair, the great organizer of our forces. A missing plane carried with it the British air marshal, Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory. There have been other losses hardly less conspicuous.

Cynical buck privates used to say, "We get the tough jobs; the generals die in bed." If this was ever true, it is so no longer. They die with boots on.

Foreigners in Naziland
Upset Reich's Economy

UAW Would Be Nice Plum
For John L. Lewis, AFL

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Allied armies on the western front are being helped materially in strange ways by prisoners and forced laborers now inside the Reich. One report relates how foreign workers and captives are undermining Nazi morale by the simple device of spreading discredit of the Nazi financial system.

How to Insult The Nazis
Since these foreigners are cut off from their homelands until the war is ended, they feel they should spend their earned funds on tangible goods rather than "bank" it. They spend freely, buy anything of tangible value, promoting the black market and—add insult to German pride—tell Nazi shopkeepers to "lassen sie nur" (keep the change).

Foreign circles report this complete disregard for the stability of German currency and financial institutions is having a marked effect on Nazi morale and is inspiring distrust among the "herrenvolk" for their own banks and reichsmarks.

IF JOHN L. LEWIS goes back into the American Federation of Labor and starts actively to woo Congress of Industrial Organization members for the federation, one of the most fertile fields will probably be the United Auto Workers union.

Biggest CIO union, approximately 1,000,000 strong, the UAW faces an unstable post-war future. Lewis originally organized the auto industry; countless UAW members are strongly attached to him. The auto union, moreover, now is torn by conflict among the leadership. R. J. Thomas' grip as international president is considered none too firm. He recently attempted to increase the number of vice presidents in the UAW to build up his support but the move failed when he left for a brief trip to London.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—The Republican champions of a workers draft think Mr. Roosevelt was spoofing them when he advocated it in his annual message to congress.

New York Representative James W. Wadsworth publicly was quoted as saying the President would have to lend the measure more than lip service, or he would not even introduce it again.

The other co-author, Vermont's Senator Austin, has been growling off the record for months that he was hoodwinked when the President endorsed the measure a year ago and then left the fight for it to General Marshall and Admiral King, who could not swing congress then and cannot now.

The common story thus has sprung up that Mr. Roosevelt is merely going through the motions of leadership on the measure because it would be embarrassing for him to resist such an important demand from his Army and Navy leaders, yet does not wish to push the matter to a successful conclusion because the labor unions have been bitter against it.

He is just shoving a politically unpopular issue raised by the armed services upon a congress he knows will reject it—they suspect.

There may have been something in this interpretation up to now, but certain quite unmistakable changes on the inside have become apparent and some surprises may be developing. An outspoken senatorial opponent of the workers draft, for instance, declined public comment on Mr. Roosevelt's message, but privately said he had been so shocked by recent developments on the western front, (shortages) he believed critical war conditions had grown sufficiently bad to justify the legislation.

Furthermore, the unions have gathered so much power in the last year that a question has arisen as to whether Mr. Roosevelt might not like to get a rein on them himself. The legislation would give him a hold on the unions.

People now laugh at the politically-minded unionist in the White House having such a thought, but talk about a possible national coal strike in the Spring is being heard. Would not the President like to use a draft act on John L. Lewis? More ardor from the White House for the legislation is possible this year, I think.

Inner workings on compulsory military training are somewhat different. Until a few weeks ago there was no detectable opposition to taking all youths 18 to 21 into army camps for a year as the war department was proposing. Then churchmen began to dissent, and now Republican house leader Martin suggests it would be a good idea to wait until peace. There are enough Democrats of similar mind to make a majority.

At the moment, it appears quite possible congress will drag out its committee discussions of this question as well as the workers draft.

If it is delayed until peace, most people think it will be killed entirely. War enthusiasm then will have cooled, in case the peace is anything like Mr. Roosevelt's promises of how good it will be.

This possibility of killing all plans for military education of the youth seems to me to be as dangerous as the army plan to draft a year of each youth's life. Military subjects can be made compulsory in the schools and colleges without building a federal youth camp system, depriving boys of a year of their business lives, and the national guard can be expanded to the efficiency of a real guard of the nation (Continued on Page Eight)

DIET AND HEALTH

Is Coffee Harmful?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

I HAVE always stated in this column that coffee drinking was not a harmful habit. In fact for many people it is beneficial. It keeps the circulation going at an even rate in the heart and kidneys.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

People subject to "heart attacks" do very well with it, using no other medication. Of course for the same reason that it increases the rate of circulation in the heart and kidneys it increases circulation also in the brain and, for this reason, tends to keep one awake. But that is a minor disadvantage that can be avoided by not taking coffee with the evening meal.

Some Reservations

Now, perhaps I will have to make certain reservations about the entire harmlessness of coffee. I say perhaps because I am by no means convinced by the evidence, but I will present it in complete fairness.

Three Chicago investigators, Drs. J. A. Roth, A. C. Ivy and A. J. Atkinson, report that caffeine and coffee beverages increase the secretion of the stomach and hence predispose to the formation of ulcer. They also suggest that by studying the prolonged stomach secretion response to coffee it is possible to spot those people who are predisposed to have ulcer.

They produce no case histories on human beings which would indicate such a relationship, but in experiments on cats where the inside of the stomach can be observed the use of caffeine causes a "blushing reaction" over the lining membrane, and if histamine is given alternating with caffeine there is seen some epithelial desquamation and small erosions which might turn into ulcer if they were further irritated.

Cat Experiments

I must confess I am not much impressed with this evidence. I have lived through a good many periods when people had produced small multiple erosions in the stomachs of animals by one means or another. One was with broth cultures of certain germs. One was with infected tonsils. But the real difficulty of acceptance was that all these erosions promptly healed up.

I suppose we all have small ulcerations in the stomach from time to time—after making a round of the latest night clubs or attending a fraternity banquet. But that isn't the same thing as having an ulcer of the stomach, which is a chronic affair and really digs in.

The ulcer patient has had to abstain from all alcoholic beverages taken away from him because they increase his secretion. My experience with real ulcer patients is that they are perfectly content to let the alcoholic drinks alone because they are made so uncomfortable by them that the pain outweighs the pleasure.

Coffee Neutralizes

But I never once heard one say that coffee made him uncomfortable. And if one puts enough cream in the coffee it will neutralize the excessive secretions, cream being one of the most favored articles of diet for ulcer.

The idea that the secretary response to coffee helps to pick out the ulcer susceptible person is somewhat complicated. It is probably true that the person who develops an ulcer of the stomach or duodenum has a special type of human constitution—atomy and physiology, response to stimuli, etc. But the evidence is not by any means clear or agreed upon by all observers.

I once asked one of these human constitution experts to pick out a ward of patients, about none of whom he knew anything, which ones had ulcer. He only made a mistake of 90%. So I have no great confidence in this procedure as a practical measure. I do not believe Drs. Roth, Ivy and Atkinson after giving their caffeine secretary test to a hundred people would be willing to commit themselves to a prophecy that any certain individuals were destined to be ulcer patients within the next five years.

Personally you will find me at the breakfast and luncheon table with a large pot of coffee before me—at least until more evidence accumulates that it is doing me any harm.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. C. S.—Is smoking cigarettes injurious to one's heart with high blood pressure?

Answer: Tobacco is a direct constrictor of the blood vessels, raises blood pressure and may precipitate attacks of angina pectoris.

J. K.—Is ice water harmful to drink all the time?

Answer: It has never been proved harmful. The stomach has a great capacity for reducing all substances entering it, hot or cold, to body heat.

CORPSES AT INDIAN STONES by Philip Wylie

SYNOPSIS

How would you like to have been christened Agamemnon Telemachus Plum and—though now a learned doctor and professor, age 34—to be called by many: "AGGIE" Even the Greeks might have no classic word for your answer. And to be under the personal social supervision of Aunt Sarah, jolly, sophisticated, and gossipy? Well, Aggie and Aunt are now in the ancient and expensive family limousine with Windle, the chauffeur, and Chilli, the maid, motoring north towards the cool mountains from the summer heat of New York City.

CHAPTER TWO

For half an hour, neither Aggie nor his aunt said a syllable. He smoked his pipe. At length, she spoke. "I've got a sore throat!" Aggie brightened. "I'll tell Windle to turn around!"

"You'll do nothing of the sort! I've spent ten years and more trying to get you out of that military museum for a summer with me. I know perfectly well you'll escape if we stop for a flat tire. I'd go on through to Indian Stones if I had double pneumonia!"

The professor's luminous glance contained affection and humor—but he was careful not to let his aunt see that. "Anyway, I'm not giving up the museum. That's for winter. Classes and the lab. I'm giving up a trip with Grubb—he's the Britisher—to Patagonia."

"Grubb," said Sarah. "What a marvelous name for an archaeologist! You know, you need a vacation! You're starving for op. You're seedy, or relaxed—or taken a girl to a dance—for a decade."

Aggie folded his hands into a "church and steeple." He rested an elbow on the arm-perch in the car and put the points of his forefingers under his chin. "I'm glad you brought that up," he said musingly. "Ever since I got that mandatory letter, I thought you had my mating possibilities in mind. The last of the Plum? I suppose you have something in the nature of a female in mind for me?"

"I have," Sarah answered serenely. "Aggie was startled. 'You can't be serious? I was joking!'"

The ponderous woman nodded. "You're getting on, Agamemnon. Thirty-six, isn't it?"

"Thirty-four."

"Exactly. You're becoming quite desiccated. Quite. You're too old to be running off to all corners of the world digging up bones. To me, there's nothing exciting about a defunct tiger's teeth. You really must stay at home long enough to raise a family. You need a wife—"

"Granting I'm going to raise a family, yes. A wife, under such circumstances, would be the usual thing."

"I'm not fooling, Aggie."

"Neither am I!" Professor Plum's tone was remarkably firm.

"Look, Sarah. I am spending this summer with you because I love and adore you. Nevertheless, I deplore every idea that runs through your pretty gray head. It is a bee-hive of middle-aged inspiration. I am a bachelor. I was born to be one. I will stay with you only on condition that you do not force upon me a single member of the other sex. Your matrimonial-agency reputation is appalling! You should have been a fight promoter. And you never married yourself, so you're a doddering hypocrite. Who is the girl?"

"Beth Calder," said Sarah. "Calder," Aggie repeated. "Out of the frying pan into the Caldon. I Calder but she didn't come. No limited. I do not remember her at all. Thank the Lord."

"Jim Calder—Beth's father—ran away with George Davis's wife. There was a frightful scandal. And they didn't divorce and remarry. Mrs. Davis apparently found that Jim was no bargain—even when compared to cold-blooded George—so she simply settled in California. Left Calder, and also her husband and her daughter, to shift for themselves."

"Delightful," said Aggie. "And you want me to marry into this shambles?"

"Beth is a charming young woman."

"So was Lucrezia Borgia," Aggie replied. "I am going to read and good. Look. Whoever this Beth is, I will have none of her. In my mind's eye, I can see her. A woman with aniline-auburn hair. A golf and tennis-playing woman, with the voice of a macaw and a capacity for cocktails that would humiliate a steel salesman. A woman whose chief aim is to get into the lobby of a theater on opening night in a dress that will make several courtesans hang themselves. Phooie. Faugh."

"You wouldn't remember her," Sarah continued, unabashed. "You were—let me see—twelve?—the last time you went to Indian Stones. Beth is about—twenty-six—now. That would make her four years old at the time—"

"I remember the name of Calder vaguely," he said. "And with some sort of shady connotation. What, I forget. As for a female Calder child, my association with infants at the age of twelve having been rest and meditate this summer. Sarah. I intend to write a monograph on the subject of preglacial animal migrations over the Alaskan Islands. I may do a paper for a friend of mine about the egg-laying monstrosities. Otherwise, I shall have no active life. If you import into your cottage, which I remember and love, so much as one skirted creature—if you give me one welcoming party—if you make one single effort to sneak me into the social life of that pestilential colony—I shall pack my books, my specimens, and my trophies—and scam, as my Juniors say."

"Beth's a brunette," his aunt answered. "The fever-giving kind. Like Hedy Lamarr."

Aggie's response was in Latin. From the sound of it, Sarah was glad that he did not trouble himself to translate.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

PROMOTING YOUR KING

WHEN YOU hold the trump king and see the ace in the dummy, you usually expect the declarer to have the next lower honors. So your king is threatened with being caught in a finesse toward the dummy—that is, if the ace has as many guards as your king, in the form of one or more lower cards. But if you can reduce the number of small cards accompanying the ace, by compelling the dummy to ruff, you may thereby promote your king into a trick winner.

All that West had to do, to hold the declarer to exactly his contract, was to lead a third diamond and make the dummy ruff. Then nothing could have kept the heart K from winning a trick.

There was really more than an extra trick involved. The contract itself might have been beaten by this procedure if South had guessed the club finesse in the wrong direction.

You're Telling Me!

PAPER is now being made of glass. This will be tough on mystery story readers—they'll be able to see the solution before they are half way through the first page.

South Africa, we read, leads the entire world in diamond mining. Well, that's at least one department in which the Dark Continent outshines the rest of us.

The world, laments a philosopher, has lost its sense of humor. Well, there's nothing like a war to fracture one's funny bone.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If your iron sticks when you iron starched clothes, there are several things that might cause it, and you should check them. Insufficient cooking of the starch is one; careless straining is another; allowing a "skin" to form after cooking may be the cause. Keep starch covered and stir occasionally to prevent formation of the "skin." Your iron may not be hot enough, or there may be excess starch on the surface of the garment.

Fresh vegetables can be dehydrated until they lose practically all their water, and yet hold a good share of their original food value, flavor and color. This is an achievement in modern food processing. Vitamin C loss is greatest of the food so processed. Practically all the other vitamin, protein, mineral and energy values of the fresh vegetables are preserved when good methods of dehydration and storing are followed.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, January 15

Monday's astrological forecast holds a precautionary note, in matters pertaining to health, work, property and all ambitious situations, where a constrictive, static, or depressing state of affairs may obtain. With a concentrated study of affairs, and a marshalling of latent forces, crystallized and stubborn conditions may be productively manipulated. Alert, practical and careful handling of all affairs may break through stubborn barriers, even in personal contacts and relationships.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of limitations with stubborn obstacles or impediments which call for concerted marshalling of all the available resources, facts and faculties. At the same time health must be considered, with that of the family, and funds, position, and all interested safeguarded. Perhaps postponements or delays might be blessings in disguise.

A child born on this day may have certain talents and subtle abilities, be serious and earnest but may be overwhelmed by obligations or other impediments. An optimistic viewpoint and tokens of loving appreciation should greatly assist.

FORMER COLLEGE STARS JOIN LOCKBOURNE FLIERS

The Lockbourne Fliers today added two new players to their roster for their second quarter-final round game of the Eastern Flying Training Command's basketball tournament with Blytheville Army Air Field at the base gym Wednesday night.

The new men, who will see only part time service against Blytheville because of an EFTC ruling which permits only one officer to play at one time in the game, are Lt. Harold McGehee and Capt. Milard Pedigo.

Lt. McGehee is a former Arkansas Tech cager, who stands six feet four inches in height and weighs 220 pounds. He will jump center for the Fliers.

Capt. Pedigo is a University of Oregon luminary. He is an excellent shot and is very fast on a basketball court. He will play a forward.

Each officer recently returned from the European Theatre of Operations where they completed a number of missions as pilots of B-17 Flying Fortresses.

BUCKEYE CAGERS PREPARE FOR BUSY WEEKEND

COLUMBUS, Jan. 15—Ohio State university cagers started work Monday in preparation for a busy week end of play when they play host to Michigan Saturday and Purdue Monday. The Bucks defeated Michigan earlier in an overtime game and dropped a one-point decision to Purdue.

Coach Harold Olsen Monday had words of praise for his team which defeated Northwestern 53-46 Saturday night. He had particular praise for Jack Pfeiffer who entered the game after four minutes of the second half and scored 15 points before he was ejected in the final minute of play.

Olsen said he doubted if Pfeiffer would replace Arnold Risen in the starting lineup, but would see plenty of action at forward and center.

One-Legged Athlete Stars On Grid, Court

LOGAN, Utah — Joe Anderson isn't just another guy named Joe. And he isn't just another athlete. Joe Anderson is a cripple, with only one good leg. And yet he's on the cage squad and was reserve center on the football team at Utah Agricultural college.

Joe Anderson competes in many athletics and won letters in football, tennis and basketball at West high school in Logan.

Eleven years ago Joe Anderson was a normal Salt Lake youngster of seven years, fostering dreams of some day excelling or at least duplicating the feats of his heroes of the sports world. One day he cut his leg, an apparently harmless wound which healed in due time.

Nothing was thought of this old hurt until little Joe began to complain of pains in his leg. In time, the doctor was consulted and the dread news revealed: Joe was the victim of osteomyelitis, an infection of the bone.

Medical science failed to stop the disease and Joe lost his right leg just below the knee. The disease spread, entailing other operations, but in time it was checked.

But Joe, although crippled, had the courage of the truly great athletes. He asked no quarter for his artificial leg and participated with the neighborhood gang in all sports.

Goes To Utah State

Came time for high school and Joe enrolled with his pals at West high. It wasn't easy for a kid with a game leg to mingle with the rugged high school competitors, but Joe stuck it out, winning monograms in football, tennis and basketball.

In the Summer Joe played softball, becoming so proficient behind the plate that he caught several of the better pitchers.

This Fall he decided to enroll in college and went to Utah State with several of his classmates. When the gang went out for football, so did Joe, although he must have been one of the few cases in intermountain athletics when a boy with an artificial leg volunteered to play a game as tough as collegiate football.

He was reserve center, but so well has he adapted himself to this "inconvenience" that Coach Romney used him 20 minutes of the opening game against the rough and tough Pocatello Marines.

And Joe's no martyr, as witness his popularity with the student body. When the class elections were held this Fall Joe Anderson's name led all the rest in the voting for freshman class president.

BASEBALL HOPES FOR 'GO AHEAD' SIGN FROM FDR.

Ford Frick Reported To Be In Line To Take Over Commissioner Post

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—Baseball hoped for another "green light" from Washington today for a fourth war-time season and should the game survive an expected manpower crisis, it appeared almost certain that it will be under the direction of National League President Ford Frick as its new high commissioner.

A 10-man committee now is completing a new agreement under which the successor to baseball's first and only commissioner, the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis will serve. Although its work will not be done until early next month, Frick seemed assured of the support necessary to get the position.

Despite denials to the contrary, he has been campaigning silently for the job. The former sports writer, who left his typewriter and radio work in 1934 to become head of the National circuit, reportedly lined up enough American League backing to overcome the opposition of club owners in his own league.

His elevation to Landis' post is expected to follow the February baseball meetings here. The agreement committee will convene February 2 with a joint session of the majors scheduled to begin February 5. That is the meeting at which the 16 major league club owners are expected to elect Frick as baseball's second commissioner. His powers probably will not be as great as Landis' were, but he still will be the game's controlling factor.

Frick's advancement, of course, would vacate another prized baseball position and to succeed him, Frank Shaughnessy, president of the International league, appeared to be the leading candidate. Well versed in every angle of the game, Shaughnessy was expected to receive the backing of at least six of the eight National league clubs.

To keep the line of acceptance going, it looked like William A. Manley, who has been secretary of the International league for many years, would be the logical successor to Shaughnessy.

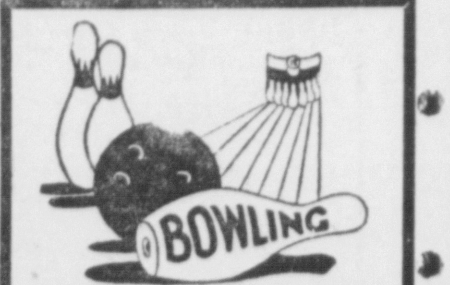

As important as this is to the future of the game, however, the question of Landis' successor was not the foremost in the minds of baseball men today. Their first consideration was the United Press revelation that the forthcoming ban on non-essential usage of electricity will not prohibit night baseball. The War Production Board spokesman said that the order, which WPB Chairman J. A. Krug will issue soon, will not apply to the use of lighting for any outdoor recreational activity.

Baseball men felt that the WPB ban on the issue was an indication that perhaps President Roosevelt will give the game another green light such as he did in 1942 in a letter to Landis.

Failing in that, they hope that War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes will issue a directive verifying the administration's attitude toward baseball and other sports in 1945.

The 16 major league club owners were not too concerned that the proposed manpower edicts, even if enacted by congress, would force them to close. Although they may have to scrape the bottom of the manpower barrel, they feel they have enough men to go around this year if Washington does not apply the same yardstick to baseball as it did to horse, harness and dog racing.

Catskill Park, in the Catskill mountains, contains 544,000 acres, of which the state of New York owns 232,000 acres.

for giving Phillips H. Lord his most unusual "David Harding—Counterspy" script to date! Lord was idly flipping through one of the volumes and happened on a chapter which dealt with the Ainu, a weird and almost unknown tribe of white-skinned, blue-eyed Japs. With this as a background, the imaginative Lord wrote "The Case of the Ainu," which "Harding" will investigate on Wednesday.

The "Suspense" drama, "Sorry, Wrong Number," starring Agnes Moorehead, which has been called by many critics the most breathtaking thriller ever broadcast, will be repeated late in February, one year since its last airing. Miss Moorehead has done the program four times, but the request for return airings has been so heavy she'll probably keep on repeating it every Winter.

Lynn Gardner, featured songstress on Bob Hawk's comedy quiz, "Thanks to the Yanks," keeps a date with an old friend this week in Cherry Point, N. C., when she presents her torch tunes to the Marines there. When Lynn first started in the singing business she learned the tricks of the trade from Bandleader Ray Block whose featured vocalist she was for a season or two. Block, now on a camp tour and suddenly in need of a singer, wired Lynn and asked if she could help him out during an emergency. So—shortly after the west coast repeat broadcast of "Thanks to the Yanks" Monday night, Lynn flew to North Carolina to resume, temporarily, her old spot on Ray Block's bandstand.

Although Abbott and Costello no longer have guest stars on their Thursday broadcast, they, in turn, will be guest stars early in February when they visit the Andrew Sisters Show.
